BronxWorks Offices Transition to Phase II
COVID-19 Safety Guidelines in Place at BronxWorks Offices

On Monday, July 6, BronxWorks offices officially transitioned to NY PAUSE guidelines for New York City's Phase II reopening. Non-essential BronxWorks staff who were working remotely returned to their sites for two day a week schedules. New protocols and safety measures were adapted at all locations and signage reminding everyone to social distance and wear masks are featured in common areas.

Prior to arriving to their assigned site, BronxWorks staff check in utilizing a mobile app and complete a health self-assessment to determine if it is safe for them to come to work. In addition, BronxWorks installed infrared thermometers so that staff and visitors may take their temperature prior to entering BronxWorks offices and locations. BronxWorks location capacities are kept lower than 50% to ensure maximum safety for staff and to accommodate community members and program participants who are on site.

John Weed, Assistant Executive Director, noted, "While we transitioned well to having our non-essential employees all working remotely, returning to the office and having direct contact with the communities we serve was warmly received by staff. BronxWorks is committed to providing our Bronx neighbors with the programs and services they need as efficiently and completely as possible."

Summer Programming Part 1: Teens and Older Youth

The BronxWorks Children and Youth Department were thrilled to open limited programming for all age groups in July. While funding seemed quite uncertain from New York City agencies until the end of June, BronxWorks secured some private donations to ensure that at least some of our regular offerings would be viable through this unprecedented COVID-19 summer. In this month's newsletter, we focus on programs made available to teens and older youth. These include two of our very popular programs: History Makers and the Summer Youth Employment Program.
While 2020 has been a challenging year, the BronxWorks History Makers youth program celebrated its 15-year anniversary. History Makers is made possible in partnership with Fordham University and the Center for Community Engaged Learning. As a mainstay of the BronxWorks Center for Achieving Future Education Program (CAFÉ), History Makers exposes high school students to the college experience. Traditionally, the History Makers program takes place at the Fordham Rose Hill campus and culminates in a one-week stay at the dorms. However, due to COVID-19 concerns, History Makers transitioned to a virtual model this year.

History Makers 2020 included 18 student participants, all rising sophomores, juniors, and seniors. The students were recruited from Frederick Douglas Academy III, Theatre Arts Production Company School, Celia Cruz Bronx High School of Music, and Manhattan Hunter Science High School.

Students attended daily classes and workshops from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. over the course of two weeks. The course load engaged the students in virtual lectures and workshops focusing on social justice and language, facilitated by Fordham University staff and faculty. On Fridays, students participated in college readiness workshops, as well as virtual tours of various college campuses.

History Makers was founded to provide underprivileged Bronx students with the education and support required to show that college is a real opportunity for all. Throughout the upcoming 2020-21 academic year, students will continue to participate in innovative programs designed to prepare them for college and career success.
This summer 360 students from Academy for Language and Technology, Frederick Douglass Academy III, and Career in Sports High School participated in the SYEP Summer Bridge Program. Students had to complete virtual project-based experiences during the five-week sessions, adapting to a new normal for many workplace environments. SYEP partnered with multiple programs and companies to give students the best possible experience.

SYEP provides older youth employment opportunities and experiences to build their résumés and make money over the summer.

Program Coordinator Natalie Villanueva says, "Our young people are the future generation. Programs such as Summer Bridge help prepare our youth to build the necessary skills to advance in the workforce and network with a wide range of people, organizations, and businesses. In addition, it gives our young people the opportunity to gain income to save and/or support their needs."

In addition to their projects, students learned about successful résumé writing, financial literacy, and interview skills, and explored different career opportunities. SYEP Summer Bridge also works to craft the experience to each individual student to best help them with their future.

The Summer Bridge program was funded thanks to the Robin Hood Foundation. In addition to Summer Bridge, 200 students participated in a modified SYEP program offered by the New York City Department of Youth and Community Development. While also in a virtual format, the program provided valuable experiences as well as a source of income to the participants.
A native of Massachusetts, Sarah Kimball relocated to New York while pursuing her Master of Public Health at Columbia University. A professor suggested Sarah consider applying for a position at BronxWorks as she quickly considered New York City her new home. In 2018 with her graduate degree in hand, Sarah joined BronxWorks as a Program Developer, reporting directly to Scott Auwarter, Assistant Executive Director.

"I love my job. This position allows me the flexibility to work with many different programs and focus on very varied tasks and projects."

A self-proclaimed data nerd, Sarah has been an integral part of many metrics-driven initiatives including the implementation of Efforts to Outcomes (ETO), an agency-wide database and referral system. Sarah also serves as the project manager of Attendance Matters, a pilot program that assists families living in shelters by identifying and removing barriers that may impede their child's/children's ability to attend school.

Sarah's unique skill set and varied interests have made her an invaluable part of the BronxWorks staff. She is enthusiastic, inquisitive, and determined. Sarah enjoys the fast-paced atmosphere at BronxWorks and appreciates her working relationships with colleagues.

"My co-workers are great. I appreciate being a part of their work and sharing successes as our participants overcome challenges."

As the Bronx was thrust into the COVID-19 pandemic, the transition to remote working was an adjustment for Sarah. "I was so used to just going to a colleague's office or traveling to another site whenever I needed to," she says. These days, she is in the office part-time, and while her dog misses her at home, Sarah is grateful to be back on-site.
When Sarah is not working, she is an avid runner. She has completed three marathons including New York, Boston, and Chicago. Sarah is using this year to take a break from the rigors of marathon training but continues to run recreationally.

She is also optimistic when asked, "What's next for you, professionally?" With an undergraduate degree from Boston University in physiology and true determination to continue to work with underserved communities, Sarah is interested in expanding her work in public health and, specifically, epidemiology. "There is an incredible need in these areas, especially now," she states. No doubt, Sarah will continue to make her mark in the world of public health and social services.

BronxWorks is proud to partner with CitiBike as they continue to expand through the South Bronx.

In August, CitiBike opened their 1,000th CitiBike station in New York City in the South Bronx outside the Word of Life Church. The BronxWorks Community Heath Program has partnered with CitiBike to establish outreach campaigns aimed at developing messaging and materials to promote healthier lifestyles in the Bronx. BronxWorks looks forward to growing the partnership with Citi Bike / Lyft as we collectively try to address transportation inequities while improving the social determinants of health for our community members.
